Doxologies are an expression of praise to God. In the Christian church, we often hear them sung or chanted. They are a tradition that has meaning and importance for all Christians. Since the early church, doxologies have been a way for Christians to express their love and thankfulness for what God has done in their lives.

Doxology - It's Meaning & Importance in Christianity

The word doxology means a short hymn of praises to God. The tradition of a doxology began in the Jewish synagogue. Various denominations have their own doxology or forms of praise to God. Praise God, from Whom all Blessings Flow is sometimes known as the Old 100th, or the 100th Psalm, although it was first associated with Psalm 134 in the Genevan Psalter, which was a collection of songs compiled over the years to reflect the teachings of John Calvin and the Psalms.

Behind the Doxology: Praise God from Whom All Blessings ...

Doxology, an expression of praise to God. In Christian worship there are three common doxologies: 1. The greater doxology, or Gloria in Excelsis, is the Gloria of the Roman Catholic and Anglican masses, and in its hundreds of musical settings it is usually sung in Latin. It is used in the Roman Catholic liturgy in a contemporary translation and is used liturgically, often in older translations, in many Anglican, Lutheran, and other Protestant worship services.

doxology - A Collection of Prayers

One of my favorite quotes is that good theology (Godly truth) leads to good doxology (Godly praise). To put it another way, authentic worship flows out of Biblical truth. R.C. Sproul said "Theology must always end in doxology: the joyful praise of our Creator; otherwise we have not truly studied the things of God."
